

I have been EXTREMELY satisfied with Indiana's Telephone Privacy law, and I'm against any federal law that would lessen the ability to block unwanted and meddlesome sales calls at our local level. Before the law was enacted, I would normally average around 8 unwanted calls per week. Since the law went into effect, I've not gotten any, plus I have the satisfaction of knowing who to turn to if any solicitor does get through.

Please...if you are going to make a national no call law, model it on the Indiana version...to the letter. Do not enact a weak law which undermines our very effective local law.

Thanks for listening.
